19th Annual IASBS Meeting on Condensed Matter Physics & School on Recent Advances in Nanophysics

May 29-31, 2013

The aim of this meeting is to bring together experimental and theoretical scientists in the field of condensed matter physics to present their recent results and to make an atmosphere for discussion. Moreover it is a good opportunity for young researchers and students to gain experience by joining this community. A one-day school is also planned prior to the meeting, which will offer lectures for graduate students and young researchers on a special topic each year. The subject of this year school will be “Recent Advances in Nanophysics”. Please note that you can only apply for a contribution in the form of a poster presentation. All posters are subject to a review process. The organizers will select few of the accepted papers for oral presentations as short contributed talks. There will also be a number of invited talks.
